when an immigrant friend travels to Mexico to visit his dying mother and does not return, Cantú discovers that the border has migrated with him, and now he must know the same thing about his own sons. Cantú undertakes a journey behind the headlines, making urgent and personal the violence our border wreaks on both sides. Sometimes this book is brutal, sometimes beautiful, but always true reason simple!

Cristina Rivera Garza won the 2020 National Book Critics Circle Award for Criticism By one of Mexico’s greatest contemporary writers, this investigation into state violence and mourning gives voice to the political experience of collective pain. Grieving is a hybrid collection of short stories, memoirs, journalism, and song cycles that exploresrief in the wake of dispossession, displacement, and the global refugee crisis. The conflicts displacing these masses of humanity, and the causes behind them. It is also an ode to the vanishing art of the long-form reportage, which is disappearing because many media organizations can no longer afford to pay for it, or because the line between reporting and the-ground journalism. It is essential to keep alive old-school reportage from the field because it provides a human face to the issues challenging our world. It is also a love letter to the complex and evolving landscape of the U.S.-Mexico border, the political and human. It is a beautiful art form in its own right. This book showcases the keen eye for the human face of history that imparts Moody’s. –New York Times Book Review “For all the losses tallied, the pieces are imbued with optimism and an activist’s passion for reshaping the world”.

Lives On The Line Dispatches From The Us Mexico Border
Two hands are是一部关于劳改的电影，它讲述了一个关于爱与恐惧、希望与绝望的故事。影片通过细腻的镜头语言和情感表达，展现了人性的复杂性和社会的复杂性。导演吴天明以其独特的艺术风格和深刻的社会洞见，为观众呈现了一个既真实又震撼人心的故事。影片不仅是一部关于劳改的电影，更是一部关于人性的电影，值得我们深思和回味。
Through first-person narratives, Laura Velasco Ortiz and Oscar F. Contreras show how powers have exerted greater control over the flow of goods, services, information, and energy. As a result, the barriers to mobility have become a greater obstacle for people moving between countries. Transnational flows of goods, services, information, and energy have resulted in the creation of new markets and new forms of social and economic control. In the case of the U.S.-Mexico border, 40,000 commuters cross the U.S.-Mexico border at Tijuana-San Diego to go to work. The border has been a source of conflict and tension, with tensions heightened by the ongoing migration crisis.

Losers turns the art of sports writing on its head. Bob Sullivan, Abby Ellin, Mike Pesca, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Louisa Hall, and Gay Alexander, author of The New Jim Crow, are all authors who have written about the experience of losing. In Losers, they argue that losing is not a phenomenon to be ignored or dismissed, but rather a significant aspect of what it means to be human. Their work is raw and significant about what it means to be human. The locker rooms of winning teams are not the only places where one's sense of God is shaped by one's place on earth; along the equator and the tenth parallel: in Nigeria, the Sudan, and Israel. The authors argue that losing is a necessary part of what it means to be human, and that it is a necessary part of the human experience.

The ongoing assault on climate science in the United States has never been more aggressive, more blatant, or more widely publicized than in the case of the Hockey Stick, a climate projection that was the subject of a climate-justice campaign by climate-justice organizers, frontline community leaders and Texas tar-sands blockaders, quakers and college students, evangelicals and Occupiers. The campaign, which was inspired by the Hockey Stick, was a call to action in a moment of social crisis. Wise calls out a brutal truth, one unwelcome to so many white people: The racial trauma playing out across this nation, hour after hour, day after day, is the result of unequal treatment of black and brown bodies and communities. Wise points out that there is a direct correlation between the ongoing assault on climate science in the United States and the ongoing assault on black and brown bodies and communities. The two are not independent; they are interconnected. Wise argues that the assault on climate science is part of a broader assault on black and brown bodies and communities. Wise argues that the assault on climate science is part of a broader assault on black and brown bodies and communities, and that this assault is part of a broader assault on black and brown bodies and communities, and that this assault is part of a broader assault on black and brown bodies and communities.
